Rescue teams will practice their response to an aircraft crash in Hereford next week, reports The Hereford Times. The one day "multi-agency" emergency response exercise" takes place on the Rotherwas Industrial Estate. Next Wednesdays exercise' near Chapel Road will rehearse the region's civil and military response to an aircraft collision. The simulation will include smoke, so businesses and residents are asked not to be alarmed. The purpose of the exercise is to challenge the responding agencies and test the processes where civil and military agencies across the West Midlands work together to resolve a major incident. Businesses and residents will be unaffected by the exercise and will be directly informed prior to the event.
